ESTIMATES FOR PENSIONS.

Figures Are Too Small. Treasury officials view with some surprise he estimates sent up by Secretary Noble for ensions. They are, in their opinion, too small, but as it is their duty to put them in the "book of estimates" in they will go.

Secretary Noble figures in round numbers are $165,000,000 for pensions for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1894, and $10,500,000 as a deficiency for the fiscal year 1898, which, with the

The Treasury Department is now paying out pension money at the rate of $13,500,000 a month. This makes the present rate $162,000,000 a year. But this rate is increasing each month, and unless the pension office stops work altogether and does not allow any new cases or increases, the rate it is estimated must increase to at least $14,000,000 before this present fiscal year is ended. When the fiscal year 1833-4 is reached, for which Secretary Noble says $166,000,000 will be sufficient, the pension rate, it is believed by the best posted officials in the Treasury Department, will be $15,000,000 a month, or $180,000. 000 a year, which will leave a defici

If they meant what they told the people during the campaign they could not offer any excuse for a failure to meet in special session soon after the 4th of March and begin the whittling down of the tariff. I do not think, however, that they will have a special session. What I expect them to do is to pass a few special tariff bills which will not materially injure the McKinley law, just so that they may say that they have revised the tariff, but leave the general protective policy as it is in the main and claim credit for the good result which are bound to come from that policy. Representative John C. Tarsney of Missonri reached the city last night and will make Willard's Hotel his headquarters for the winter. He said to a STAR reporter this morning: "I believe an extra session to be a matter of policy. The people have shown that they desire a re duction of the tariff, and this should be the first question which our party must consider. In order that a tariff bill should result beneficially it is necessary that it should operate for a certain length of time before the people pass judgment upon it. The result of placing the Mills bill before the public in 1888 and the McKinley bill in 1892 was a defeat for the party which enacted them. We should not be caught in the same trap this time. If we can meet the latter part of March, or the 1st of April, and decide upon the character is the same trap that the same trap this time. decide upon the changes in the tariff, so that they can go into effect by the 1st of September. the bill will be operative fourteen months be-fore the next election.

The financial question is a very important one and will have to be met by prompt action.

From the present outlook it does not seem as though both ends can meet. The expenditures though both ends can meet. The expenditures appear to be running above the receipts on account of the large bounties and the big pension roll. Although Commissioner Raum places his estimate at a small figure it is probable that the pension figures will reach £180,000,000 this year. The economy cry is not a practical one, as we discovered by our efforts in the last Congress. The expenditures have been made so large by the republican party that it is now impossible to reduce them without harmful effects to the workings of the government.
